

Describe the connection between a series of historical events, scientific ideas or concepts, or steps in technical procedures in a text.

Louis Braille

Before reading Louis Braille with your students, discuss with them the connection between the series of life events described in the book. One possible topic of discussion could be how the childhood experiences of the individual influenced goals later in life.

After this discussion, read Louis Braille with your students, then have them share their ideas about the connection of events described in the book.

Reaching Above

Before reading Reaching Above with your students, discuss with them the connection between the series of life events described in the book. One possible topic of discussion could be how the childhood experiences of the individual influenced goals later in life.

After this discussion, read Reaching Above with your students, then have them share their ideas about the connection of events described in the book.

The Courage to Learn

Before reading The Courage to Learn with your students, discuss with them the connection between the series of life events described in the book. One possible topic of discussion could be how the childhood experiences of the individual influenced goals later in life.

After this discussion, read The Courage to Learn with your students, then have them share their ideas about the connection of events described in the book.

Discovering Dinosaurs

Before reading Discovering Dinosaurs with your students, discuss with them the connection between the series of life events described in the book. One possible topic of discussion could be how the childhood experiences of the individual influenced goals later in life.

After this discussion, read Discovering Dinosaurs with your students, then have them share their ideas about the connection of events described in the book.

